

Figure 4.11 | Concentration gradient of 12 nm silica particles measured at 8000 eV. The large size of the colloids in comparison to a saccharide molecule provides a longer diffusion time than a typical contrast agent like sucrose.